A life-changing event occurred in my life as a professional health care provider and a professional networker in the summer of 1998. After literally years of searching for a “home” in networking, for an ethical science-based health and wellness company with financial stability, I found 4Life™ Research. I found a product line I could believe in and I knew that both my patient base and network base would both benefit in life-enhancing and life-changing ways. I now have 12 months of proof that 4Life™ Research products, particularly the immune boosting line of Transfer Factor™ and T-Factors Plus™, can and have changed people’s lives. This experience has boosted my belief in my potential to help others stay healthy and well, as well as succeed in the MLM business world.

As a physician in the world of networking, I walk a very thin line. Putting my credibility on the line touting the use of natural products for health and wellness can be a little scary at times, relative to how it could reflect on me professionally, both with my patients and other fellow professionals. With 4Life™ Research and Transfer Factor™, this issue has been a moot point. All of 4Life™ Research products have strong, well-documented science behind their development. For other traditionally trained allopathic physicians and me, it is a matter of willingness to open ourselves up to learning about a “new and somewhat foreign” concept, that of health, wellness, and prevention, rather than disease oriented medical care. Once open, the impressive science is there in these products to justify the interest and commitment to use and recommend these products on a daily basis in our families, our patients, and ourselves.

And so twelve months ago, I began a journey into and found my new home in health and wellness and in networking. First, after a month of personal use of their products, I started sharing them with patient’s families. Month after month of increasing success with improved health, reduced infectious disease and reduced antibiotic use, and reduced office sick visits ensued and with it, I started to share our successes with other physicians and the networking world. One conference call led to another, and now we join 3-5 calls weekly and appear at national and regional meetings teaching others about Transfer Factor™ and the other life-changing products of 4Life™ Research. Our success has been twofold: first, the greatly anticipated changes in health occurred, mostly in quiet but impressive ways; and secondly, the networking commission checks built consistently. I can now see a very satisfying success level being achieved in both areas and it is very gratifying.

In order to provide the greatest degree of support to individuals who align themselves with me in my network marketing pursuit, I have aligned myself with the nation’s most experienced support group, Professional Networkers. Professional Networkers’ president, Mike Akins, has been a successful leader in the industry for more than 32 years. The full-time staff at Professional Networkers insures that my business associates will receive the finest support available in the industry. Also, I have set up a website to keep my network marketing associates informed of the results from the use of Transfer Factor™ by my patients.

Most recently, I completed a retrospective study in the use of Transfer Factor™ in children, which will soon be published. In a nutshell, we saw a very impressive and biostatistically-significant 74% reduction in reported illness and an 84% reduction in the use of antibiotics in 88 children using Transfer Factor™ for 6 months or more consistently when compared to age and sex-matched non-users. We are now preparing the study for release in the near future.

In a “networking nutshell,” this networking physician has found a very comfortable home, where I can succeed in my personal and professional needs to promote health and wellness, and where I can replace my 20-year practicing physician income. It doesn’t get better than this.
